How some things fold, and others unfold, and how a chair came inbetween.

Sometimes we have briefings at the Studio to produce bespoke furniture series which turn things upside down. Now we are very good at seeing things from different angles, and of conceiving forms which defy function by pulling and pushing expectations (and materials).

The LAÇO Chair was one of those challenges. How to turn a lounge, slumber down, lazy, almost English Club like piece into something completely unique.

That almost chocolate smooth texture which reminds us of Bridge games and Cohiba smoke is now something which can turn any room around. Soft, velvety, tender. But still with that raw and rough appeal which reminds us of Sergio Leone classics (the Kambala wood may have something to do with it).

In a way the LAÇO is a bit like Clint Eastwood. Smooth as he may be, the guy made his point very clear. As does this chair, one leather fold after another.

Forget Lounge. This is more of a Lay Over.
